OUR JUBILEE.

The year 1862 is propitious for Hamilton College. The Hamiltonian is glad to record the half-century of existence which the Institution has enjoyed. All its students, its alumni, its friends, and all men, good and true, hail the year that commemorates "the golden wedding" of old Hamilton. As Harvard, Yale, and Dartmouth, are hallowed by age, so too shall other seats of learning farther west, in the passage of time, come to be called venerable. But it is not age alone that can make an institution powerful, and impart an influence perpetually flowing forth and gathering strength. A charm, potent to operate, does indeed linger around Oxford and Cambridge, whose walls are gray with time; but is age all, or scarcely a tithe, of the real glory which is their inheritance? Are not these institutions associated with the greatness of England, and the long line of the living-dead, and the living-great? So, too, with "old Hamilton;" although crowned with fifty years of existence, her pride and her glory lie in the great work she has accomplished. An army, nearly eleven hundred strong in numbers, have graduated from her walls, and gone forth to meet the world. Nor need our Alma Mater blush to hear the roll-call of her sons. Let Albert Barnes, Edward Robinson, Parker, Hague, Gridley, Dwight, Bacon, and Kendrick, respond from their spheres of power and influence. Our band of students number full nine score, and our acting Faculty one President and ten Professors. Among the students, patriotism, individuality, and good culture exist in no inferior degree. Among the Faculty are men well chosen for their respective duties; the Executive to preside and to represent the Institution in public, by a comprehensive union of depth, vigor, and richness of mind; and the senior Professors, by a complete acquaintance with science in all its forms. Moral philosophy is clearly presented, and the youthful mind grasps with ease and pleasure what once seemed cold and repulsive. The moral reasoning leads thought upward to that which is truly the impartial. The framework of Economy, Blackstone and Duer, by the copious, pertinent, and ready illustrations of the instructor, interestingly appear to the student. While the unspoken languages are soon to be doubly represented, Homer shall have all the more. No better, purer love for the father of song can burn, and where shall the splendid literature of that early civilization be better told than it is in the classroom? Where can better elocution be taught, and the graces of the pen better cultivated than here?

The essential element of prosperity is not wanting. Good friends have opened their treasures, and new endowments follow. Taste and beauty are displayed in college grounds; and this is no slight addition to the comforts of college-life.

In view of all these good things, who does not hail the fiftieth year of Hamilton's existence? As have the past and present, so shall the future continue to brighten before her. A fitting time is '62 to commemorate the semi-centennial of Alma Mater. We call this year Jubilee, and celebrate it as such. The many friends, and the sons of Hamilton, who shall gather within her precincts, the coming festival, The Hamiltonian bids welcome. Its words of good-will follow the class whose days of college are almost run; for them let the palm of the future wave, and may they ever be true to the dreams of their youth.

In this "little world" of ours, the past year has been unusually pleasant and interesting.

The rapid succession of great events in the outside world, in which every day's experience is proving the truth or error of past theories and speculations, and laying out new fields for mental labor—has infused a new life and mental vigor into the College, which is really quite refreshing.

The Faculty have aided greatly in the cultivation of this "spirit of the times"—taking care to turn it into the proper channel. To their kindness and consideration are we indebted for much of the pleasure, as well as the improvement, of the past year. Especially would we mention the interest which the Professor of the Law Department has taken in the discussion of questions of public interest as they have arisen—referring them to the principles of constitutional and civil jurisprudence.

As an index of the increasing interest taken in it by the friends of the College, we are glad to announce the endowment of a Latin Professorship. Rev. William N. McHarg has accepted an election to this post. He comes highly recommended as a thorough scholar, and in every way adapted to discharge the duties of his position with honor to himself and to the Institution.

During the past year a new element has been added to the already complicated character of College society, in the organization of a College Church. Geo. W. Sheldon, George Bayless, and D. W. Bigelow, are the elders. Its influence on the spiritual welfare of the College cannot but be good, in organizing, developing and maintaining Christian feeling. If "brotherly love continue" in it, in spite of the conflicting interests of societies and classes—the rivalries, jealousies and prejudices so strong in college, it will send forth bands of Christians who will give a good account of the "talent" entrusted to them.

In regard to the Students as a whole, we prefer to let them "speak for themselves." We think—modestly of course—that we are a more "proper" race of men, or "boys," than our predecessors. This is due to the superior moral, as well as intellectual training, inaugurated with us by our worthy President. We appeal to the citizens of Clinton and the country roundabout, who have mourned for their gates and signs—their fruit and poultry, and their "murdered" sleep, in times past—"if these things be so" in these latter days. We would call the attention of parents having sons to educate, to their answer.

But though we are so peaceable ourselves, we look with unabated interest on the "good fight" to preserve the Union. The eagerness to get the latest news, which neither cold or storm could repress, and the enthusiastic rejoicing over the successes of our arms, are daily incidents which the Students of '61 and '62 will not soon forget. Occasionally the "war fever" has borne some from our number into the "shock of war." As far as heard from, they have "quitted themselves like men." We have placed their names on record.

We of the Class of '62 depart this college life not without a shade of sadness and a feeling of regret. During the four years of our association as classmates and fellow-students, Death has thinned our ranks; the brothers E. F. and A. H. Moss, who had endeared themselves to us by their genial companionship, their ever-hearty interest and ready assistance, shall ever remain to memory dear. L. J. Larcom and J. H. Vasbinder were with us long enough, by their modest worth and unassuming manner, to win and retain a place in our memory. War and other imperious circumstances have taken away our classmates, one by one, till only half our number "remains to tell the story" at Commencement. Thus tried we go forth as veterans when duty calls. We leave the cozy rooms, the campus smiling in beauty, the picturesque hill-side with its many very pleasant old associations, and the warm friends we have gathered round us here, with feelings of deep and tender regret—"yet we ask not to stay."

Commencement Week.—The order of exercises is found on the fourth page of The Hamiltonian, and presents an unusually attractive array. The Annual Sermon, by Dr. Fisher, cannot fail to interest the large audience on that occasion. Dr. Kendall's Address before the Society of Christian Research will be on "The Relation of College to the Missions." We predict that not the least attractive feature of the week will be the Class-Day of the Class of '62. The exercises will be held in the tent; and the talents of the speakers, whose names appear in another place, lead us to expect an agreeable occasion. Dr. Parker's address will be on the "Relations of the College to the Church." The Delta Upsilon Fraternity hold their Anniversary, and their speakers will secure a good audience. Hon. Charles B. Sedgwick's address will be on "The Relations of the College to the State." The Jubilee Exercises, consisting of addresses, speeches, and poems, by distinguished men, will doubtless prove to be an occasion long to be remembered in the annals of Hamilton College. The Class of '62, it is hoped, will equal all expectations, and make Commencement-Day inferior to none of its predecessors.

☞ During Commencement Week, the Observatory, Cabinet, Library, and other College buildings, will be open for the reception of visitors.

☞ Attention is called to the select advertisements of Davis & Gilbert, W. C. Capelle, and others, in another column.
